

The greedy brother

There were two people, their names were Hansel and Gretel. They were orphans. One day the children saw a house in the dark forest. The house was made of sugar, red cake, yellow cake, purple cake, green cake, big caramel, marshmallows, ginger bread, chocolate and the tower and chimney were icing. The gutter was in cookies. The hungry children started to eat at the home. They started with the gutter of cookies, they found it very good but the children did not know that a witch lived in this house. She was a witch who ate the children, they said she was ugly and she couldn't see well. She let the children eat her house so that they could put on weight and be able to eat them after.

The children began to eat the house, but the witch asked:

"Who eats my house?"

"It's the wind, it's the wind" sang Hansel.

"Poor idiot" got upset Gretel. The witch came out of the amazing house and caught the brother and sister.

"Don't take me for a fool. It's the wind which ate my beautiful house?"

She looked down at the two children and she informed them:

"I'm going to eat all of your bones! But you're too thin, I'm going to fatten you up."

Two weeks later Hansel was still not very fat. The witch took him and asked him:

"Go and check if the oven is hot enough."

Hansel told her:

"But I don't know how I'm going to do it, show me how I'm going to do this."

"No, no don't play with me I'm not an idiot if I do that you will push me in the oven."

The witch took Hansel and pushed him in the oven... The next day she ate Gretel...

Moral: Greed is a bad thing or don't take an old lady for a fool.

Mickaël and Matélian